

Today, we honor

Neil Schiffman

Neil Schiffman died of lung cancer in 2015. He was a cross-country cyclist (riding from CA to MA in 1987), Ironman, marathoner, Eagle Scout, educator, businessman, and loving husband, son and friend. He was also a dedicated patient advocate from the day that he was diagnosed with lung cancer, working with the Bonnie J. Addario Lung Cancer Foundation (ALCF) to spread the word that anyone can get lung cancer.

His legacy -- high energy, a positive, can-do attitude, and a fighting spirit -- continues to inspire everyone that he knew. He is missed every day by Evy, his wife of 43 years, his beloved chow chow Cubby, and his many friends.

Knowing Neil, he is riding alongside John, feeling the wind and the road and celebrating the joy of cycling!

Today, this ride in Colorado is for Neil. You will be loved and remembered, always!
